

Think back to your own school days. What do you remember most? Your fourth grade math tests, or learning how nouns and verbs work together? No, probably not! You remember holiday parties or contests, awards with ribbons you hung on your wall, or guests who showed you cool new stuff about bike tricks or science experiments during an assembly (when you got out of doing your fourth grade math test!). Social activities in the grade school are a critical part of childhood. They are a time to laugh and to break up the routine with something “special.” If you want to be the parent that every child in the school (including your own) associates with “Oooohh, we’re gonna do something FUN!” please send us a message to volunteer at georgetownPTA.ipds@gmail.com.
